Heifer International

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton announced on June 16th that United Methodist Jo Luck was named 2010 World Food Prize Laureate for her work as the Chief Executive Office of Heifer International. Heifer International along with Bread for the World were described as “two of the world’s foremost grassroots organizations leading the charge to end hunger and poverty for millions of people around the globe.”

Jo Luck has served as the CEO of Heifer International since 1992 and has created innovative public education initiatives to link grassroots donors in rich countries to recipients in developing countries, increasing the knowledge and awareness of adults and children of all walks of life regarding global hunger and poverty issues. Reaching out to supporters in this way has brought the message of Heifer's sustainable solutions to hunger and poverty directly into hundreds of thousands of U.S. homes.

By placing animal and knowledge assets directly into the hands of farmers-particularly women-Heifer International has empowered them to quickly convert these gifts into food and, often, into income-generating enterprises. A strong impact of Jo Luck's legacy as the leader of Heifer is the binding together of people emotionally and economically, enabling them to envision and create a better life for themselves and their children.
